The Latest in Schools

With the opening of the new high school, which should take place early next month the parents of Tonopah will be introduced to the last word in public school buildings. But it is not the material wealth of the structure that will appeal to the thinking persons of the community. The curriculum is what deserves attention from everyone who is interested in developing the young idea and moulding the more mature minds to the life work for which they are fitted.

For the first time Tonopah is favored with a complete school system. Not one bristling with fads and frills but one that reflects the thoughtfulness of the directors and the deep study of the faculty. For the first time children will be taken from the arms of their mothers and taught to use their infantile minds in some useful and entertaining way. The kindergarten will divert them and also lay the foundations for future training with a discipline gloved in velvet folds that will not harass the mere babies who will thus be introduced to their first lessons. Thence on through the various courses are domestic science, manual training, commercial courses, science, music, and art until the pupil is rounded out and fitted for entrance to college.

Tonopah high school is one of the few accredited schools in Nevada and under the direction of Superintendent Smith it is hoped to maintain the standard so high that there will be no retrogression. The local schools are perfecting their courses so as to present the advantages of a metropolitan education and at a minimum cost. The teachers are enthusiastic in their respective lines and the best proof of this is the fact that they are assuming more than the number of periods allotted by the course of instruction approved by the superintendent of education. After the opening of the high school when every department will be in active operation the trustees would be pleased to have every parent visit the school center where they will find their children occupied in preparing themselves for pursuits in later years. In this building the architect has planned to establish a sort of social center where boys and girls will find rational and healthful entertainment for every leisure moment. The gymnasium will help build up the body, the assembly room can be utilized for educational work of the most advanced type through the introduction of moving pictures and the social life will be enhanced by using the same room for semi-monthly dances where students will be free from evil influences and the intrusion of undesirable characters.

Altogether the school system of Tonopah will be in a new epoch and the results at the close of the scholastic year will no doubt emphasize the wisdom of the trustees in incurring the outlay.

Veracity of Newspapers

One of the most common occurrences of the day is to deride statements of newspapers concerning events and matters that important interests are anxious to keep from the public gaze. There is the case of Tim Sullivan, the friend of the poor in New York City and the man who never asked a question when he felt like giving in charity. Poor Tim disappeared from his old haunts after his election to congress and the newspapers printed a few lines to the effect that the big fellow had been going the pace too fast and was incarcerated in a sanitarium for treatment. It was intimated pretty plainly that Tim had reached the snapping point where the vitality of the brain protested against a violation of physical laws and it was predicted that he would be missed from the scenes that knew him so well of yore. These statements provoked a denunciation with the explanation that Tim was suffering from a simple infirmity and had retired to a country home for a rest. This explanation which did not explain was printed in deference to the feelings of the family and the incident would have been forgotten, until next election time had it not been for the tragic discovery of the remains of Big Tim in a morgue already billed for interment in the potter's field. Then the truth came out and every statement of the New York papers printed three months ago was confirmed.

So it was with Sulzer. The newspapers told of his speculations in Wall street and his collecting assessments that did not appear in his returns to the state elections board. This brought forth a passionate outburst of protest. Yet every word has been proven to the extent of impeachment and the disclosure of greater venality than the papers had ever suggested.

In San Francisco a story appeared to the effect that the owner of the Chronicle was in critical health. This was denied. Yesterday the truth appeared to the effect that Mr. De Young was convalescent after a night where his dissolution was momentarily expected.

When Mayor Gaynor of New York was about to leave on his last voyage he was accosted by a score of reporters intent on settling a rumor that he was suffering from a serious malady engendered by the bullet wound. It was hinted that the mayor was so weakened that he would retire from the political arena and it was plainly stated that, according to rumor, he was a very sick man. Again physicians and patient entered a vigorous denial but the truth could not be misinterpreted. In those dark Mayor Gaynor was dead.

In every case the newspapers are vindicated and the people were reminded of the old adage that where there is smoke there must be fire.

Nevada may have a change of heart next time he returns to the state of his adoption and run as a presidential but he will find he cannot pull the wool over the eyes of the sheepskin a third or fourth time. It's a case of feeding the people too often.

The value of good roads will be impressed on the county commissioners this year as never before and some of them may conclude it is cheaper to build permanent roads rather than waste money in scraper work.

When the tax commission and the county boards of equalization come to some sort of agreement regarding their respective duties the poor man will have a chance to pay his taxes.

Eastern political writers pretend to see the handwriting that will bring back a certain white hope known as T. R. with presidential possibilities.
